Dear «First_Name»:

Radiant Systems, Inc. provides point of sale and back office technology to The Fisherman's Restaurant. We regret to inform you of an incident Radiant recently discovered that has put some of your personal information potentially at risk. We are writing to provide you with information about the incident and advise you of steps you may wish to take.

On September 23, 2013, Radiant learned that certain personal information concerning employees of The Fisherman's Restaurant had been erroneously transmitted over a period of time to another Radiant Systems restaurant customer. These data transmissions took place from approximately May 3, 2013 through September 24, 2013. You are among the employees whose information was mistakenly transmitted to the other customer. The personal information transmitted may include, to the extent it was included in your records:

- Your first, middle and last name and your nickname
- Your date of birth
- Your gender
- Your marital status and your number of dependents
- Your address and telephone number
- Your Social Security Number
- Your veteran's status
- Certain employment-related information about you, such as your dates of hire and termination, and whether you were a rehire.

Radiant promptly launched an investigation into the incident, and, as of this time, the investigation has uncovered no evidence of misuse of your personal information. In addition, Radiant took steps to stop the erroneous data transmission and worked with the recipient to delete your personal information from its systems. However, as a precaution we believe it is important that we advise you of this incident and give you information about how to protect yourself.
