

CORDAY PRODUCTIONS, INC.

December 19, 2014

Dear Sir or Madam:

As you are most likely aware, Sony Pictures Entertainment (“Sony”) recently became the victim of a malicious cyber attack during the last week of November where confidential personnel and business information was stolen. Because Sony administers payroll and sometimes pays reimbursements for Corday Productions, Inc. (“Corday”), we were immediately concerned regarding the privacy and security of personal information that is maintained by Sony regarding our employees and independent contractors, as well as employees of contractors who provide services to Corday.

Corday has been in close contact with Sony regarding the security breach. We understand that Sony has not found evidence that the cyber attack has resulted in a security breach of the personal information pertaining to our employees, independent contractors or employees of contractors providing services to Corday. However, Sony has not determined the full scope of the security breach. Sony is continuing to work with law enforcement and cyber security experts to obtain more information. In addition, Corday has learned that there may have been attempts to utilize personal information concerning two of our current employees. Although we have not been able to determine whether these isolated instances are related to the Sony security breach, it gives us cause for concern.

Again, we just do not know at this point whether the personal information maintained by Sony pertaining to Corday has been breached. However, the following types of your personal information have the potential of being impacted by the Sony security breach:

If you are a current employee:	Name; address; social security number or federal identification number; salary or wage information; telephone number; and if you had your wages directly deposited, information regarding your bank name and bank account number.
If you are paid through a loanout company:	Name of loanout company; address; social security number and/or employer identification number; amount paid to the company; telephone number; and if you had your wages directly deposited, information regarding your bank name and bank account number.
If you are an independent contractor or an employee of a contractor:	Name; address; amount paid to you; social security number; and taxpayer identification number.

We have been working diligently with Sony to protect the interests of our employees, independent contractors and employees of contractors. In that regard, Sony has offered to provide you with free identity protection services for the next twelve months through AllClear ID, a third-party company that specializes in protecting individuals from identity theft. More information regarding the services AllClear ID provides is available on its website at <https://www.allclearid.com/> and at 1-855-434-8077. AllClear ID will be sending you an email message outlining the steps you may follow to sign up.

We also recommend that you protect yourself from the possibility of identity theft by remaining vigilant during this time, diligently reviewing your financial accounts and monitoring your credit reports.
